INTRODUCTION

Muminov's political and legal views play an important role in analyzing changes in Uzbek society and their consistent development. In his scientific work, Muminov envisaged the development of society not only economically, but also on political, legal and spiritual grounds. His legal and political ideas are of great importance in the formation of Uzbek philosophy, as he put forward important principles for ensuring social justice and legal equality in society. The article studies the influence of Muminov's legal and political views on Uzbek philosophy and social thought. At the same time, the significance of his ideas in modern Uzbek society and their application in practice are analyzed.

Muminov's political views are distinguished by his broad ideas about social justice, freedom, democracy, and civil society. Muminov deeply analyzed the relationship between politics and society and considered it important to protect people's political freedom and civil rights. His political views are based on the following basic principles:

- Democracy and political freedom: Muminov emphasized the need to develop politics not only by the highest bodies of government, but also by ensuring the participation of the people. In his opinion, it is important for the people to be politically active, to be able to freely express their opinions and participate in making political decisions.

- Civil society and justice: Muminov's political ideas clearly indicate the role of civil society and the main principles of its development. He considered it important to protect the rights of citizens and ensure social equality in society in order to make society free and fair. Muminov's political views emphasize the importance of justice in society, because in a just society, citizens should exercise their rights, express their opinions freely, and have equal opportunities.

- Social reforms: Muminov believed that the political structure and social institutions needed to be reformed. He put forward political approaches aimed at ensuring justice, equality, and freedom in society through social reforms.

Muminov's legal views also developed in harmony with his political ideas. He saw the legal system not only as a means of maintaining order in society, but also as the main means of protecting human rights and ensuring social justice. His legal views are based on the following aspects:

- Justice and equality: The principles of justice and equality are central to Muminov's legal views. He emphasized that the task of the legal system is not only to restore justice, but also to create equality in society. In his opinion, rights and laws should be equal and fair for all citizens. Muminov saw the rule of law not only as a state governed by laws, but also as a state that ensures the rights and freedoms of all citizens and protects justice in society. He believed that the rule of law should be supported not only by the political structure, but also by all institutions in society. Ibrahim Muminov's political and legal views played an important role in the formation of Uzbek thought. His ideas, in particular, helped to create innovations in Uzbek social and political thought and build new, just systems in society. The influence of Muminov's political and legal views on Uzbek thought was expressed in the following aspects.

- Political reforms: Muminov's political views guided the implementation of social reforms in Uzbek society. He emphasized that politics should be implemented not only on the basis of government decisions, but also by ensuring the participation of the people. This approach served to develop democracy and civil society in Uzbek politics. Reforming the legal system: Muminov's legal views determined the main directions in the development of the Uzbek legal system. He tried to ensure social equality in society by introducing the principles of justice and equality into the legal system.

CONCLUSION

The political and legal views of Ibrahim Muminov play an important role in the development of Uzbek thought. His ideas became the main guideline in implementing major reforms aimed at ensuring justice, equality and freedom in the social, political and legal systems of Uzbek society. Muminov played an important role in the formation of new political and legal systems in Uzbek society not only with his scientific ideas, but also through their practical application. His political views were aimed at developing democratic values, protecting the political freedoms of citizens, ensuring equality and justice in society. These approaches were influential in the current development of Uzbek society, especially in recognizing the role and importance of social justice and legal equality. Muminov put forward his political and legal views as a basis for improving society and expanding the freedom of citizens, and had a strong influence on Uzbek social thought. Muminov's legal views also played a significant role in creating the modern foundations of the Uzbek legal system. His attention to justice, legal equality, and the protection of the fundamental rights of citizens is of great importance in the development of the legal system and institutions in Uzbek society today. Muminov's legal and political views, having formed a new phase of Uzbek thought, laid the foundation for a more free and just political, social, and legal system in Uzbek society in the future.

The scientific heritage and political and legal views of Ibrohim Muminov occupy an important place in the history of Uzbek philosophy, and will continue to pave the way for new scientific research and social reforms in the future. His scientific and practical views play an important role in shaping the present day of Uzbek thought and determining its future. Thus, Muminov's political and legal ideas have made a significant contribution to the further development of Uzbek social thought, the formation of a modern political system and legal foundations.
